Dear world,

I am writing in response to your advertisement in the media and several spiritual publications. I can highly identify myself with the idea of living a happy life.

The nature of being human has prepared me for this position. I chose neither my hometown nor my parents. Just randomly, I found my way to the solid ground on earth. Born in a random country with a random skin colour, my interest in being happy has developed since I was born.

Lately I changed my way of thinking. Instead of being caught between past and future, I have decided to live in the now. Instead of chasing the next career level, I have levelled up my mindfulness. The idea of utilising my skills for achieving excessive company goals pervades me with reluctance. I do not want to work 9 to 5, but 24/7 for real people with a tangible purpose. I do not want to keep up with the cutting edge of technology or the Kardashians. I want to keep up with our planet's needs.

I consider myself as a curious problem-solver with a well-developed prefrontal cortex and a can-do attitude. My goal is it to enhance my professional and interpersonal skill set in a humanitarian environment. Ideally I would like to work with people, who share a hands-on working mentality and a positive mindset to enjoy every moment to the fullest.

Thank you for considering my application.

Kind regards,
Random Human Being
